The redacted text is a table comparing the instruction count of different programs across various runs and versions. The table includes columns for the test name, baseline, run1, run2, average, and the change in instruction count as a percentage (Delta %). The table also includes a note indicating that the compilation time comparison uses the instruction count as a metric. The delta percentage is calculated as the change in instruction count over the baseline.